

Mentoring Writers and Specializing in Distribution

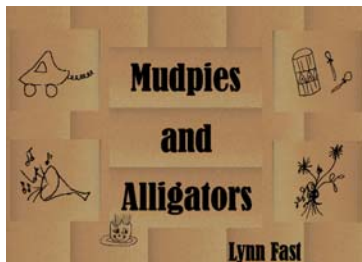

At Entry Way we also want to announce a few books we are currently producing but are not yet ready for the press. Yet the realities are near.

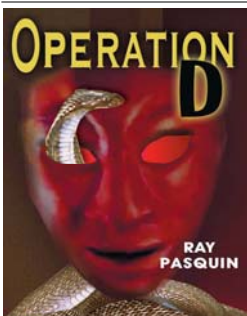

A Day in BugHollow will prove to be a delightful day trip into the lives of several of the inhabitants of this tiny little bug burg. First time author, Linda Phillips, one of our very own editors and illustrators, has managed to transform us to a magical place where being different is not so bad. As you share this book with your youngsters, allow the fantasy of these fun little creatures to take you to a child-like, simplistic world where life-lessons are absorbed without even trying. Due out the Summer of 2008.

One of the things we are most proud of about our company is that we truly interact and work team oriented projects with our writers, artists, and editors. In this children's fiction book, the true star becomes "the team" and together—the miracle is a wonderful 6-step message to children and adults about how to become aware of bugs, By becoming aware of our fears and being able to work through those—the world becomes a much happier place to live. Look for this book by Kathy Klein, Linda Phillips and VicToria Freudiger to come out in the Fall of 2008.

Lynn Fast is an expert at raising children and after five of her own and teaching others, she has written a book that actually has a two-fold message. One half of the book is to help parents to find things for an active family to do on a rainy day and half of the book is written to help busy parents to teach their children arts and crafts-style activities in order to enjoy the fact that "Every Day is a Special Day." Lynn's book will be out in the Summer 2008. Illustrated by Kathy Klein and Colorization by Linda Phillips.
